DECEMBER 2025

MANAGEMENT COMMENTARY

In December, the US economy confirmed its resilience, buoyed by robust growth. Third-quarter GDP grew by 4.3%, its strongest growth in two years. Despite a backdrop of intense trade tensions, persistent fiscal uncertainty, and still-high inflation, domestic demand remains solid, providing an important foundation for growth. Inflation in November stood at 2.7%, below expectations, although this figure may underestimate the reality due to a bias linked to the lack of data during the government shutdown. In the labor market, the unemployment rate rose to 4.6% from 4.4% previously, reflecting a gradual slowdown in employment momentum. Faced with these developments, the Federal Reserve is continuing to walk a tightrope. It cut interest rates again (to 3.50-3.75%), as widely anticipated by the markets, and announced the resumption of short-term bond purchases. The S&P 500 ended the month down slightly by 0.06%, while the Nasdaq fell by 0.73%.

In the eurozone, the Eurostoxx rose 2.39%, while November's PMI indicators, despite a slight slowdown, confirmed that activity remained positive. December inflation reached the 2% target and the composite index stood at 51.9, while the manufacturing sector remained in contraction at 49.2. The ECB, adopting a cautious stance, revised its growth projections upward to 1.2% in 2026 and 1.4% in 2027 and kept its monetary policy unchanged, while confirming that it would continue to reduce its balance sheet.

Bond markets saw an upward trend in yields in December. In the United States, the yield on the 10-year Treasury rose to 4.18% from 4.09% previously, while in the eurozone, the 10-year Bund rose from 2.75% to 2.85% and the 10-year OAT from 3.48% to 3.56%.

Under these conditions, our SGIS FUND GAP Conservative fund ended the year up 4.82% (+0.37% in December).
